

Kate Anderson

Kate is a fashion designer originally from Adelaide. The former Head Designer of Finders Keepers The Label now resides in Sydney. It was under Kate's direction that Finders Keepers The Label transformed into an internationally-acclaimed brand stocked by retailers across the globe ranging from Harvey Nichols to Harrods.

Since moving to Sydney, Kate has worked for various companies including Tuchuzy and TRIANGL swimwear.

2014 saw Kate receive Cosmopolitan magazine's Fun Fearless Female award for Fashion Designer of the Year, alongside fellow recipients in various categories, Sunrise co-host Samantha Armytage, athlete Torah Bright and singer/songwriter Dami Im.

Kate was diagnosed with Endometriosis in her mid teens after struggling with pain for many years.

"Endometriosis runs in my family – I'm so lucky to have a great support network around me. Being an Endometriosis Ambassador is important as I feel that support is something everyone should have, whether you are suffering from Endo or have someone close to you that is. The more we talk openly about Endometriosis, the more awareness and understanding we can help raise."
